

DAILY NEWS

SEARCH OUR ARCHIVE

▶ SEARCH

▶ NEWS ARCHIVE

THIS LITTLE PIGGY WENT TO PRADA

SEEMS Manolo Blahnik is the starting point for all things bookish these days. Not only was the master shoe designer one of the inspirations (and contributors), for Camilla Morton's acclaimed How To Walk In High Heels, but he's also now got us reciting fashion-obsessed nursery rhymes in Amy Allen's new This Little Piggy Went To Prada: Nursery Rhymes For The Blahnik Brigade. Designed by Bloom and published by Spy, it's the new must-have plus, even better, 10 per cent of all the book's profits will go to Save The Children. It guarantees you a giggle on Christmas morning – or any time you like for that matter. And if you don't believe us, read this:

This Little Piggy Went To Prada by Amy Allen

"This little piggy went to Prada,
This little piggy went to Cannes,
This little piggy dined at Nobu,
And this little piggy, Hakkasan.
And this little piggy went 'Wee wee wee wee!'
All the way home because she had a fat bottom!"

Or this:

(to the tune of Frère Jacques)
"Louis Vuitton, Louis Vuitton,
Mulberry, Mulberry?
Nappy bag dilemma – Lulu, Kate or Anya?
Shopping spree, buy all three."

Or this:

"There was a young woman who lived in her Choos,
Though she once had a house in a smart Chelsea Mews.
So much on Jimmy,
The house had to go,
And with it, her Amex and husband in tow!"

Or this:

"Pussycat, pussycat, where have you been?
I've been to London to see McQueen,
Pussycat, pussycat, what did you there?
I bought the collection and kissed lots of air."

Or this:

"Twinkle, twinkle, diamond ring,
In a blue box tied with string.
Tiffany's new princess cut,
Twice the size of baby's butt.
Twinkle twinkle, show your spark,
Can't change nappies in the dark."

For more information, visit www.thislittlepiggywenttoprada.com or www.savethechildren.org.uk

(October 24 2005, AM)

◀ PREVIOUS

NEXT ▶